Description:

Navoi State University of Mining and Technologies has adopted a comprehensive Code of Ethics that applies to all members of the university community, including academic staff, administrative personnel, students, and other employees. The Code of Ethics was officially approved by the Rector of the University on 1 April 2022 and entered into force on the same date.

Since its adoption, the Code has played a significant role in maintaining academic integrity, promoting ethical behavior, strengthening professional responsibility, ensuring mutual respect, preventing discrimination and corruption, and fostering a transparent, fair, and inclusive university environment. It serves as a fundamental framework for regulating the conduct of all university stakeholders and supports the institution's commitment to good governance and responsible decision-making.

The Code consists of 22 pages, 10 chapters, and 35 articles, providing clear principles, ethical standards, rights, responsibilities, and disciplinary procedures applicable to all members of the university community. Compliance with the Code is mandatory for everyone affiliated with the university.

The Code of Ethics is fully implemented across the institution and is actively enforced through established institutional mechanisms, including university management, the Ethics Commission, faculty administrations, and relevant administrative offices. Awareness of the Code is promoted through orientation sessions, staff meetings, training activities, and internal communication channels. The document is periodically reviewed and updated to ensure its continued relevance and alignment with national legislation, higher education regulations, and the University's strategic objectives.

As a result, the written Code of Ethics applies to all groups within the university, is fully implemented, regularly reviewed, and actively enforced through institutional mechanisms, contributing to a culture of integrity, accountability, respect, and sustainability throughout the institution.
